

Our recipe development dashboard takes the stress and worry out of the currency and accuracy of your supplier data. It centralizes data management, updates, and edits; putting the information you need right at your fingertips, whenever and wherever you need it.

User-friendly but powerful, our dashboard is customized to your business. It reduces time spent chasing supplier information, approvals, and ingredient specifications as well as checking, double-checking, and re-verifying inconsistent information across multiple sources of “truth” that are incomplete or outdated.

It also allows you to keep an eye on all supplier specifications, accreditations, and certifications — ensuring nothing ever lapses or falls out-of-date.

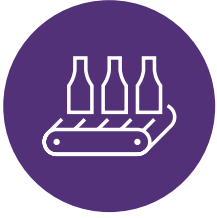

What customers say

“As well as radically improving all aspects of our business, the system has allowed us to improve relationships with our suppliers and customers. We rely on it and our customers can rely on it.”

Create better, more compliant food, faster

Your supply chain in one place

Save time and improve accuracy by managing data input and updates effortlessly with one centralized database for ingredient, packaging, and other supplier information.

Ensures the quality of your QA

Updates made to supplier data are automatically reflected in impacted recipes via a controlled approvals process providing confidence in your QA.

Delivers a single source of truth

Centralizing all product-related data in one place allows you to respond to requests from customers and auditors without wasting time checking multiple sources of information. Using this one safe, central source assures questions from customers or auditors can be answered efficiently and accurately.

Prioritise growth

Spending less time looking for data in multiple places and verifying accuracy leaves more time to focus on reducing costs, collaborating with suppliers to improve quality or finding other new ways of adding value to your business.
